Put a sheet of paper (preferably wax paper) between the front cover and first page of your paperback. Repeat with the back cover and back page. This will keep any glue from getting on your pages. Glue one cover at a time, making sure that the new leather cover hangs over the edge of the paperback by 1/8" on all sides.

It is more than acceptable to upgrade a modern book to a fine leather binding to make it a collector's edition, but when we're dealing with an antiquarian book, there are other considerations. A book, let's say, from the 1820's, should always be bound in leather, since cloth was never used during that period.

For a unique look and feel, it's possible to make the hardcover case for a casebound book using cloth or leather instead of printed paper. It's most common to use faux-leather polyurethane (PU) instead of actual leather, although some companies may offer real leather binding as well. If you want to keep things vegetarian-friendly, however, cloth/PU leather is a great option to choose.
